2027 IN ONE LINE · SATURN'S SIGN STAYS, RETROGRADE AND COMBUST SPANS

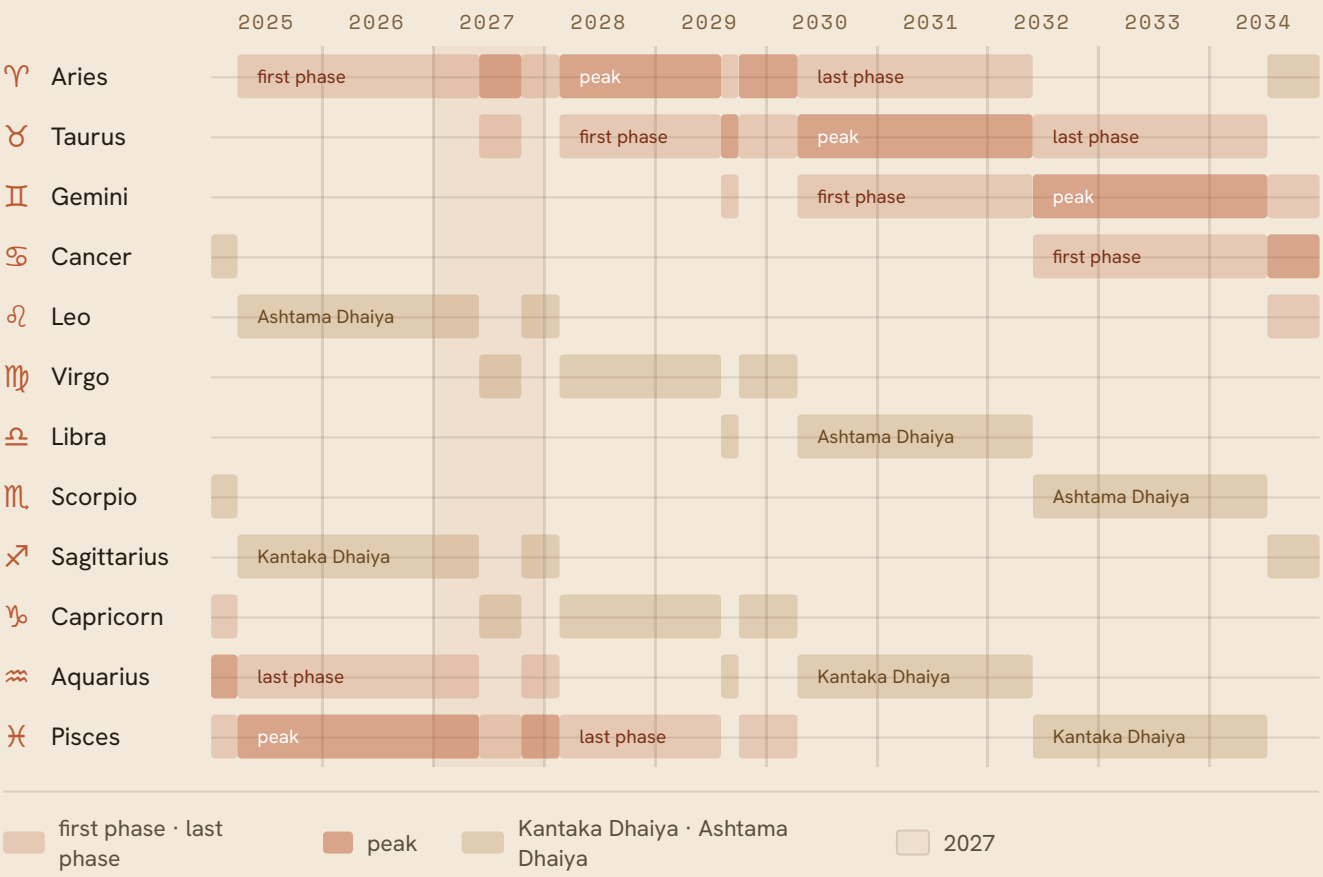

The top lane is the book's subject. Saturn crosses into Pisces on 29 March 2025 and leaves it for good only on 23 February 2028; between those dates sits the 2027 visit to Aries, the short bar marked with the arrow of debility. After it come the long Aries bar, a two-month touch of Taurus in 2029, and Taurus for good from 17 April 2030.

The lanes beneath are the planets Saturn answers to. Jupiter moves through seven signs in the same years and three times stands opposite Saturn; Rahu and Ketu hold the Capricorn–Cancer axis from 5 December 2026 to 24 June 2028, the stretch in which Saturn's tenth aspect from Aries falls on Rahu. Each hatched band under Saturn's lane is one retrograde loop, a little over four months, once a year.

The Long Calendar

Every Moon sign's Sade Sati and Dhaiya across ten years

Read across a row to see one Moon sign's decade; read down to see a year. Saturn's slow march shows as a staircase: each Sade Sati starts one sign later than the last, about two and a half years apart, and the pauses of 2027 and 2029 show as gaps inside a bar.

The shaded column is 2027. The next sheet gives every bar's dates, with the true start of the Sade Satis already running when the calendar opens.

Checked Against the Almanacs

Every date agrees. The sign entries differ by about an hour, and each almanac leans the same way on every Saturn row, the mark of a slightly different Lahiri value rather than an error; the next page shows why. The stations differ by hours, as stations always do.

Tamil Vakya almanacs, which many temples follow, compute Saturn from older tables and can place the same transit months away from these dates. The difference is one of method, and the next page names it.
